

Course on Global Data and Statistics
Division of Global Affairs, Rutgers the State University of New Jersey
Fall, 2013

Instructors

Introduction by Jean-Marc Coicaud

Mark Aakhus

Howard Friedman

Ronald Jansen

Robert Kirkpatrick

Gregg Van Ryzin

The course is being offered by several key specialists in the fields of statistics and data on an international level. It is geared towards giving students an understanding of how data is collected, analyzed and utilized globally through various channels. The course will begin with a historical approach to the evolution of global statistics and data collection. The following sessions will each analyze an aspect of global statistics. Students will be required to perform the readings and to participate in class exercises.

Requirements:

- Attendance is mandatory. If a student misses more than three classes without good reason, he or she will be unable to get credit for the course.
- Each session will be from 11:00am-1:40pm on Mondays
- Assigned readings are mandatory, students should be expected to be asked about readings in class.
- Active participation is required in class and represents 30% of the final grade.
- A final paper of 4,000 words, representing 70% of the final grade, is required at the end of the class for the final grade.
  - Students must agree on a topic with the instructors no later than October 28.
  - The first draft of the paper will be due by November 18. Based on the feedback provided by the instructors, the students will finalize their paper by December 13 at the latest.
  - No extensions will be given, if the paper is not submitted by the due date you will receive a failing grade for that percentage of the course.
